SAFE ROUTES TO SCHOOL: MOVING THE YOUNGER GENERATION

NDOT is moving the younger generation by kicking off the second round of funding for the Safe Routes to School program.

Safe Routes to School is a federal funding program aimed at reducing childhood obesity by increasing the number of elementary and middle-school children who walk or bicycle to school. To provide more appealing bicycle/walk alternatives, the program, overseen by NDOT, reimburses local government-associated bicycle/walk programs with federal funding.

in 2007/2008, its first funding cycle, the program pledged over $1.6 million for 11 different programs across the state, from Clark and Washoe counties to Lincoln County and other areas. Programs funded range from improved bicycle/walk paths and 800 lit school crossing-guard paddles to public education initiatives such as walking safety Web sites and drivers education billboards.

Now, the program has begun its second round of funding by inviting local agencies to take part in training. Led by nationally-certified Safe Routes to School instructors, the recent training gave insight on how to develop easier, safer school walking and bicycling programs and infrastructure.
